Imitation Policeman Scare Holdup Man
Such an effective imitation of a squad of policemen approaching on the run was given yesterday by Mrs. Louis Schulze, 2302 Menard street, that a highwayman holding up her husband in his store at the same address, fled in terror.
Mrs. Schulze, who was in the rear, saw the holdup man, called loudly for the police, and then beat rapidly on the floor with a carpet beater.
The robber mistook the noise for the footsteps of policemen, as it was intended he should, turned and ran without the loot.

[b)] 0r 1856?
Surname sometimes Grieve or Griewee or Greve or Grive

Owned a store at 2302 Menard Street in St. Louis City, MO (They also owned 2304 Menard). When she and Louis died, the store went to their two daughters, who ran it for awhile, then sold it. Louis' second wife Emma lived there still when she died in 1950. The building is no longer standing, it burned down some time ago. The Schulze family lived on the second and third floors and the other building.
